A FREE PRESS AND A FREE PEOPLE--AN UNBEATABLE TEAM!

By Dean Kenneth E. Olson
Medill School of Journalism
Northwestern University

The Italian People had no heart for this war. They were dragged into it by a ruthless, ambitious dictator. But to bend the nation to his will this dictator first had to take from his people their most precious right--- a free press. As early as 1922 Mussolini began destroying newspapers which dared oppose him. By 1925 his control of the Italian press was complete.

Italians probably did not realize what they had lost. But soon they found that all their other individual rights were dependent upon this right. Once the press, representing the voice of the people against government oppression, had been stilled they found that freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, all personal liberties had gone with that key freedom. Now they were lied to, browbeaten, made slaves of a dictatorial state. Today in abject defeat, their country torn in battle between their oppressors and their deliverers, Italians are probably the unhappiest people in the world.

To most Americans this right of a free press is something we just take for granted. We "cuss" our newspapers as we "cuss" the weather and figure that freedom of the press is just something that publishers rant about.

But freedom of the press is not a special privilege bestowed as a divine right on American publishers. They are but the trustees of a right that belongs to the whole people--the right of every American to know of those happenings which may affect his welfare.

Our founding fathers had had bitter experience with a tyrannical government rule which suppressed colonial papers that dared speak for the people. They knew that their new experiment in democracy could succeed only if there was a free press which could inform the people and warn them whenever their rights were threatened. And they wrote that right into the constitution as an inalienable right of the American people.

For 160 years this free American press printing facts and reflecting the thinking of the people, daring to oppose government leaders wherever necessary has given the American people the information which has enabled them to act in their best interests.

The purpose of National Newspaper Week is not to laud the American press but to stop for this one each year to reflect on this right which has enabled our democracy to endure and which has made our nation great and strong.

Today the American people know more of what is going on in their own country and on every battle front than do the people of any other nation. And they are strong in that knowledge for they know what they are fighting for. A free press and a free people are an unbeatable team.

IGNORE THE RUMONGERS; PRESS WILL GIVE YOU THE TRUTH

By Dr. Curtis MacDougall,
Medill School of Journalism,
Northwestern University

"Of Course the newspapers can't say anything about it, but— buzz, buzz, buzz!"

How often has someone opened a point of conversation with you with some such words? Always the authority who knows or, at least, dares to tell more than your editor, columnist or correspondent has his information "straight from the horse's mouth."

"Straight" usually means overhearing some loudmouthed public gossiper, someone just returned from Washington or some minor public official or political hangeron. It is a myth, irritating in peace-time and dangerous in wartime, that professional newspapermen are brim full of "inside dope" which they keep jealously and arrogantly to themselves. It is an even more atrocious myth that the rank and file of Washingtonians or of petty jobholders have greater access to what facts exist than the highly trained newsgatherers who devote full time to the task of ferreting out information of public interest and importance.

In other words, distruct of the press in wartime is irrational and deleterious. Of course our government uses censorship as a military weapon and the newspapers cooperate so well in concealing facts which would be of aid and comfort to the enemy that the code under which they operate has been and ill continue to be voluntary.

The press also stands as the public's watchdog, alert to detect any attempts to impose a censorship beond the limits of national necessity. The American people should have their confidence in their newspapers never to submit to any censorship not in the public interest.

The peddling of rumors is bad for national morale. Only a few men at the very top give full military and diplomatic strategy more than a hint to the rank and fileFronts. In wartime it cannot be otherwise. If anything is revealed officially one can generally be sure that it justifies comment,the newspapers will be the first to learn of it and to pass it on to readers. Aunt Polly's and Cousin Bess who traffic in "off the record" information just don't know what they are talking about. The best way to deal with them is to force them to substanciate their stories by ironclad authority. If they can't do so, while they aren't, yours is the opportunity to contribute to the war effort by "telling them off." Refer these sixth columnists to the newspapers which are telling all that can be told and doing a good ob of it under trying circumstances.

PARROT STORY

The Baltimore Evening Sun

This small story comes to us through the courtesy of the French grapevine. A German officer, upon entering a village in France, was greeted by the proprietor's pet parrot, which said: "Death to the Boches!" The German merely smiled. The next day, however, when the parrot repeated the same remark in his presence,the German did not smile. The third day, when the German came into the cafe, the parrot said it again. "More Boches--" This time the officer jumped up in a great rage and shouted at the proprietor: "If your parrot says that again tomorrow, you'll go to a concentration camp." After the German had left the cafe, the proprietor, perspiring freely, took the cage and went to see the priest, who also had a parrot. The parrots were exchanged. Next day the German officer stalked into the cafe and passed directly in front of the cage. Silence. He paced back and forth; still the parrot kept silent. Finally, he stood directly in front of the cage and said: "So? Not saying anything, eh? Come on, come on. Death to the Boches! Death to the Boches!" And then the parrot, in a surly, even voice, said: "May God hear you, my child."

APPOMATTOX'S LOSS

From the Farmville Herald of September 10.

Appomattox, historic adjoining county seat to Farmville, is going through the throes and regrets of losing a man, who in the past quarter of a century or more has builded himself into an institution, and has been a factor in the upbuilding of the community.

The writer does not know H. M. Burge personally, but hundreds and thousands of citizens in this area do know him. Since he embarked in business in a small way as a general merchant, here building has taken the place of the original frame buildings, and five other lines of activities house, in modern buildings and modernly equipped having his name have developed to the point where in 1942 the aggregate business totaled $385,243.17.

Though aided by competent help, the details of such a vast business gradually take their toll, and now Mr. Burge finds his health facing to the extent that the cares of business must be shelved.

No man can build a business to the aggregate of nearly $400,000 annually without having been honest, reliable and thrifty, with employees of the most courteous mein. Undoubtedly Mr. Burge has inculcated into his employees the ideals and principles upon which he has builded so successfully. In advice given, and precepts carried out Mr. Burge has done a service for the community which undoubtedly will be reflected in the future by the advancement and success of those who have been in his employ.

Appomattox loses a man of worth to her active business life, but his influence will be felt in civic affairs as long as he is permitted to enjoy life.

To the People of this Community:

DRIVE DEPENDS ON YOU!

Would you take a free ride on a wounded soldier's back? That's exactly what you would be doing if you did not do your duty in the Third War Loan.

3rd WAR LOAN Your idle weight would be felt by him on the battlefield. Every civilian counts in this kind of war. Every civilian must make his energy and his dollars work for victory.

Keep in mind that while our national goal in this drive is 15 billions of dollars, this money is being borrowed from you and you and you. You are, as an individual, the deciding factor as to whether we reach this goal. An extra $100 War Bond becomes an extra rifle, extra shells and extra fighting power of every type.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Old chests, beds, bureaus and the like can be made so attractive and fresh looking with a little paint, and then decorated with cut-out wallpaper designs.

These designs are pasted on the newly painted chest and then shellacked with clear shellac over the top.

The popular decals are used similarly, but are a little hard to find in exactly the design you want.

Old-fashioned valentines make attractive decorations for chests, as do pretty prints of flowers.

If you would rather not decorate your furniture, then make thin wooden frames and frame the valentines, prints or wallpaper clusters. Use about 12 of these over the chest, or bed in rows of three.

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

To Electric Utilities and Their Customers:

The War Production Board has proclaimed that maximum war production requires the greatest possible conservation of manpower, transportation, fuel, equipment, and critical material such as copper, steel, tungsten and many others — much greater than has been heretofore accomplished. It believes that this greater conservation can be accomplished by the voluntary cooperation of all citizens of our country in the effort. It has called for the institution of a program to effect savings on all home fronts by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies. These agencies have been developing the details of the conservation program.

Each principal industry and agency is organizing to carry the objective of the War Production Board to its members and they, in turn, to their customers so that the fullest conservation may be obtained. This is a definite challenge to each operating unit and each individual in the electric utility industry to do his or her share in backing up our fighting forces. We cannot exert maximum force against our enemies if waste on the home front is tolerated.

In the electric utility industry, the installed generating capacity, together with capacity now under construction, is ample to meet all foreseeable electric needs. But, it is essential to save the use of electricity wherever possible so as to reduce directly or indirectly, the demands for materials, fuel, transportation, and manpower.

The Office of War Utilities, in consultation with representatives of the electric utility industry, both public and private, has developed a comprehensive program to achieve the objectives of the War Production Board within that industry.

The desired result will be obtained through the full cooperation of millions of people in the conservation program. With everyone contributing, the effect will be tremendous in hastening the day of Victory.

Sincerely yours,
J. A. Krug
Director
Office of War Utilities

Anniversary

Frank W. Hanenkrat and Lena Rider Hanenkrat were married fifty years ago, September 20, 1893, at Farmerstown, Holmes County, Ohio, by the Reverend J. H. Miller, of the Church of the United Brethern in Christ, of which the bride was a member. Mr. Hanenkrat was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio and Lena Rider was born in Holmes County, Ohio.

The first three years of their married life they lived in Holmes County, Ohio. Then they moved to the western part of the state, making their home in Logan County for the next eight years. In the spring of 1905, they moved to Appomattox County, pursuing their present farm home from Mr. M. C. Smith.

They are the parents of four children, two girls and two boys. The oldest daughter, Anna Edell, is the wife of the Rev. Robert R. Doverspike, pastor of the Garfield Street Evangelical Church, Johnstown, Pennsylvania. The youngest daughter, Alma Verona, is married to Mr. George Hemmer, and resides in Chester, Pennsylvania. The sons are Charles F. and Franz W., Jr., both living locally. All the children were present to help celebrate the anniversary.

The twin sons of the Rev. and Mrs. Doverspike were present. Larrayne, who is in the U. S. Army at Haswell and Wayne, who is employed by the Bethlehem Steel Co., at Johnstown, Pa. Two younger grandsons, Robert A. Doverspike, a Marine and Dale E. Doverspike, who is in the Navy and stationed at London, England, were not present. Other grand children present were: Mrs. Arwilda Freeman, of Burlington, N. C., who's husband, Ford Freeman is stationed at Camp near St. Petersburg, in Florida; Frank Hanenkrat, III, also Thomas, Dorothy, Inez, Elizabeth Hanenkrat; other grand children not present were: Mrs. Mary Karlo, of Dolygeville, N. J., and James Wonderling, of New Brighton, Pa., also Fred Hanenkrat, of Portsmouth, Va.

The great grandchildren are Wilda Ann Freemon and Wayne Kieth Doverspike, both being present, and Robert James Karlo and Larayne Kim Doverspike, who were not present. Out of town guests were Mrs. Hanenkrat's brother, William, of Glenmont, Ohio, whom she had not seen for 17 years; Miss Deloris McKee, of Johnstown, Pa., and Mrs. Larayne Doverspike, of Prairie Du Sac, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanenkrat received many beautiful gifts.

Open house was held from 2 to 5 P. M., when many neighbors and friends called and tendered their greetings and best wishes. A total of eighty people registered.

The daughters, and daughters-in-law were hostesses and served a very dainty lunch. They were dressed in black satin with yellow corsages and accessories.

At 6:30, the festive meal was served. Places were set for 20 guests. After prayer by the Rev. Doverspike and the singing of a verse of "Jesus Has a Table Spread" toasts were given to the honored guests by their two sons, Charles and Frank. Then a message of felicitation and good wishes was presented by Rev. Robert Doverspike for Bishop John E. Stamm, D. D., R. I., D., and the Pittsburgh Conference of the Evangelical Church.

In spite of the rain which was greatly needed, it was beautiful and cheerful day.

Giraud Saw His Jailer As a Prisoner in Africa

WASHINGTON—It was, as Gen. Henri-Honore Giraud told the story, a situation where he might well have said: "Fancy meeting you here!"

One year after he had escaped from the escape-proof German prison fortress of Koenigstein, General Giraud was sharing in the triumph of Allied forces over the Germans in North Africa two months ago. Along came a group of German prisoners. Among them was the officer who had been the general's jailer at Koenigstein.
